Visit to the Tao Heung Museum of Food Culture

Activity Objectives

- Understand the culinary cultures of Hong Kong and other regions, including cooking tools, containers, tableware, and spices.
- Familiarize with various dim sum dishes, the people, and the environment of tea houses.
- Learn dining etiquette of "dim sum."
- Experience the tea culture of the Chinese.

Activity Description

This outdoor visit involves preschool children and teachers exploring the "Tao Heung Museum of Food Culture" and participating in a "dim sum" activity at " Chung's House."

The museum features simulated scenes and rich exhibits that introduce children to the unique culinary culture of Hong Kong, such as street vendors, dai pai dong (open-air food stalls), and traditional tea houses.

Afterwards, the children went to " Chung's House " to enjoy "dim sum" with their peers. They not only tasted a variety of Chinese dim sum and tea but also experienced the joy of visiting a tea house. During this process, children learnt social and dining etiquette, such as the custom of "dim sum," where they can lightly tap the table with their fingers as a way to say "thank you" when someone pours tea for them, and enjoy the pleasure of sharing delicious food with friends. It is believed that through this hands-on experience, children will gain a deeper understanding of Hong Kong's culinary culture.
